Mrs. Augustus E. Perkins Left Note for Her Husband, Who Was Found Murdered.

"GOADED ME WITH YOUR ABUSE"

Coroner's Jury Returns Verdict of Homicide in Bentonville, Ark., Tragedy, but Does Not Place the Blame.

Bentonville, Ark., March 1-The body of in a cemetery near his home, nine miles north of here.

The Coroner's inquest developed the fact that he had been "murdered by parties unknown," having been struck in the back of the head by a blunt instrument. There was also a deep gash in the right temple.

The body was found in the top of a fallen tree, about 200 feet from the house. A rope was tied loosely around his neck, passed over the tree body and tied to another tree. It was so fastened about the neck that those who examined the body say it could not have caused death. It is the theory of all that he was murdered and placed in the tree to avert the suspicion of murder.

The house is a rough board house of two rooms, elegantly furnished with furniture from Kansas City, including a fine upright plano.

rooms, elegantly furnished with furniture from Kansas City, including a fine upright plano.

When these parties came here in August, Perkins came with the car and stock, while the wife and Powell, his adopted son, came on a passenger train. When they went out to the farm the young people rode in a surrey, and Perkins rode by himself. Neighbors say the three got along happily together. Perkins was a fine-locking man for his age and formerly worked for Armour at Armourdale, Kas.

Investigation of the premises indicates that the leaving of the wife and adopted son was well planned, while Perkins was in town. Before departing, Mrs. Perkins left the following note, which was found on the dining-room table, under Perkins's plaise. "Feb. 8—Gus: When you return to-night you will not find me here. I am going away with the man I love. You have goaded me to it with your abuse. I thought when I came to Arkansas with you and you were away from my folks, that you so much disliked and they you, that you would stop your treatment, as you promised me before you came, but I tried and tried, but I could not stand it longer. Good-by.

"P. S.—Tell ma to forgive me. Her address, if you remember, is 233 Mercer street, Kansas City, Mo."

QUICK ACTION OF ENGINEER AVERTS C., P. & ST. L. WRECK.

Passenger Engine Ploughs Through Avalanche of Dirt From Bluff Near Slifton Terrace.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Alton, March 1.—Application of the emergency air brake by Engineer Brady, when he saw an avalanche of dirt rolling down the side of the bluff, a quarter of a minorth of Clifton Terrace, averted a serious wreck to the C., P. & St. L. southbound passenger train No. 1 to-night.

The train was stopped as the engine plowed through the dirt. The tender was deralled and it was five hours before it was replaced and the dirt removed.

The passengers were shaken up by the abrupt stopping of the train, but escaped injury.

The train was thirty minutes late and was running at a high rate of speed. While rounding a reverse curve, Engineer Brady, by the rays of the headilght, saw the dirt falling and he applied the emergency brake.

The front end of the emigne plowed through, but the avalanchs came down the side of the bluff with such force as to envelop the tender and knock it from the track.

There were many St. Louis passengers aboard the train. It passed through Alton at midnight. The train was in charge of Conductor Winchester.

He found the boy there all right, seated well above high water mark; a package of Uneeda Biscuit in his hand; his mouth full of the contents.

"What in the name of common sense have you been doing down here all this time?" inquired the grocerman

The boy looked up with a good natured grin; guiped once or twice; finally gained control of his speech and replied:

"Geel I ain't found a spoiled package of Uneeda Biscult yet I've opened and tried all of this big pile here, and this is the last package. They're just as good and fresh as ever!"

Worth and Denver road, and reached its destination at Fort Worth last night, three full days behind schedule time. J. R. Parker of Denver told The Republic correspondent of the trip:

"There were close to 100 passengers on the train when we started out. Weather conditions were about normal for the mason; some snow, a snapping, biting atmosphere, and some gusty, blowing winds. Before we reached the Colorado and New Mexico border line, however, a full-grown bitsand was on; and when we reached Textine, on the Texas border, the snow looked as if it were world-wide, and the wind was howling wildly.

PASSENGERS SHOVELED SNOW,

PASSENGERS SHOVELED SNOW.

The trainmen sould not afford to stop at such an isolated place, and it was determined to proceed as far as Dalhart, forty miles below, and there determine whether we would proceed further. We wanted to get to Amarillo or Clarendon, if possible, becaus they were larger places.

"Ten miles below Texline, however, we ran into an ocean of snow, so to speak, with drifts in every direction, looking like immense white waves of winter. There was no let-up to the bliszard winds.

"The train got into one of the immense drifts and became stalled. There was a good supply of coal in the engine tender and in the cars, but the water in the engine tank had run low and soon the male passengers on the train had to fall to and take turns shoveling show for the engine to use as water to keep up steam.

SNOWDRIFTS 40 FEET HIGH.

"We were held by the snowfifts away up there in the Panhandle seventy-three hours before we could die enough to help the engine pull us into Dalhart, thirty miles. When that place was reached it was learned that the telegraph operator had worked hard with all the stations available—Amarillo. Clarendon, Childress and Wichita Falis—to send up snowplows and other assistance.

"The passengers all got acquainted and passed the time as pleasantly as could be under the conditions. No one was made sick. We played cards, told stories, sang songs and many of the men went out rabbit hunting and shot numerous large specimens of mule ears.

"The snow through the Panhandle, from Texline to Clarendon, would average 20 inches deep on the level, and hundreds of drifts were 30 to 40 feet high and miles in length. Large numbers of cattle must have perished. Our train reached Wichita Falis—early yesterday afternoon, where we got the "quare meal" and other conditions of modern comfort that we had not experienced since leaving Denver."
